WALDORF ESTATE OF FEAR

On October 12th, 2018, The Haunt Rater visited Waldorf Estate of Fear in Lehigh, Pa. It has been two years since we visited the Scream Queen and she greeted us with open arms, returning victims must have been on her mind.

INFECTION

Our first stop was Infection. We were given a flag belt with three flags that represent three essential organs. "Guard them, your life depends on it" were our instructions. Last time we faced off with the infected, we lost a member of our crew. Once we left the safety of our guide the zombies were all over us. Turn, after turn, after turn there were zombies waiting for us. We tried hard not to lose any vital organs but, it was nearly impossible! We managed to all get out with at least one of our flags. Infection is a terrifying attraction and will have your heart racing with excitement and fear!

Since we were feeling slightly infected we thought we would rest at the Waldorf Hotel. Needless to say, those that awaited us had something else in mind. Rest? Eternal rest perhaps! The monsters were ready to make us permanent guests and a part of their show. As we moved from room to room our bravery was tested. The atmosphere in the hotel was enough to send chills down your spine. Monsters, ghouls and ghost had us on our toes. It felt like an eternity before we found the exit. Waldorf Hotel will scare the HELL out of you!

TERROR IN THE CORN
haunted hayride

Our last stop for the evening was Terror in the Corn Haunted Hayride. A lot has changed since we were here last but, one thing hasn't changed and that is... The Pumpkin King! The king greeted us then, sent us on our way. Creatures of the night were popping up left and right. We were surrounded! As we moved on we saw a lot of our favorite horror movies come to life. Every scene was done to perfection and the monsters were on their "A" game. My personal favorite scene was... well I'm not going to tell you but, I will tell you this: Go to Waldorf to experience Terror in the Corn, and... "You'll float too"!

Waldorf Estate of Fear lives up to the hype. There is a reason why we inducted the Scream Queen Angela Moyer into the Hall of Scares! Visit Waldorf Estate of Fear to find out for yourself!
